Hague, January 25.

A Letter written by Mr. G. from Rome, to Mr. M. at Munster.

Sir,

I Write you an impartial Account of what pass'd in the Consistorial Congregation held here the 23d of this Month, to examine the Validity or Invalidity of the Elections made at Munster the End of August and the 30th of September.

That Congregation was compos'd of 26 Cardinals and Prelates, and was empower'd to consult on an important Affair that has made so great a Noise in the World, but not to decide it, the Pope reserving that to himself after they should make their Report to him. It may be said of this Congregation, quot Capita tot Sensus, for they were divided into Eleven different Opinions, which were reduc'd into 4 Classes.

In the first Class were 7 Persons intirely devoted to France and modern Spain. The Cardinal de la Trimouille, a Frenchman, and Successor at Rome of Cardinal Janson de Fourbin. Cardinal Giudici, a Spaniard in the Interest of the House of Bourbon, born at Naples. Cardinal Cassoni, a great Friend of Messieurs Plettenberg and Furstenberg. Cardinal Pignatelli Archbishop of Naples, who dares not act but as directed by France. Cardinal Prioli devoted to France. Monsigr. Corradini, a Neapolitan, Monsigr. Passionei. Of these 7 Voices, 5 are absolute, in favour of the Bishop of Paderborn, viz. Trimouille, Giudici, Cassoni, Prioli, and Corradini. Pignatelli and Passionei's Voices were very equivocal, they having added, that if the Bishop of Paderborn was not confirm'd, the Bishop of Osnabrug ought to be confirm'd.

The second Class, tho' intirely devoted to France, is more against the Bishop of Paderborn than for him; because they suppose his Elections to be Defective, and advise the supplying of those Defects. Their Names are, Cardinal Ottoboni, who has openly engag'd in the Interests of France. Cardinal Panciatichi, a Florentine, and an avow'd Partisan of France. Cardinal Sacripanti, who leans towards the two Crowns. Cardinal Panfili, a Roman, who leans the same Way. Monsigr. Sergardi: Monsigr. Minotti. Both Companions of Cardinal Ottoboni. Father Damasceno, a Conventual Monk, a Creature of Cardinal Ottoboni's. These 7 Voices being only Conditional, the Bishop of Paderborn may rather fear than hope any thing from them: They are defective if rightly consider'd, seeing 'tis necessary to supply their Deficiency.

The third Class are of Opinion that neither of the Elections ought to be confirm'd, but that the Bishoprick ought to be conferr'd on the Bishop of Osnabrug. They are, Cardinal Carpegna, Cardinal Pauluzzi, Cardinal Nerli; Cardinal Imperiale, who added, it ought to be further examin'd, whether it would be best to confirm the Bishop of Osnabrug; Monsigr. Olivieri, Monsigr. Ansaldi. These 6 Prelates have no Dependance on foreign Potentates, their Voices are absolute, and founded on the German Concordats in which are these express Terms. 'It is our Pleasure likewise, (says the Pope) that in the Metropolitan and Cathedral Churches, even those that are not immediately Subject to the holy Apostolical Chair, Elections shall be canonically made and presented to the said Chair, which we will expect within the Time prescrib'd by the Constitution of Pope Nicholas III of blessed Memory, which begins with the Word Cupientes. Which Time being elaps'd, if those Elections have not been present'd, or if presented are not duly Canonical, we will ourselves provide; and if they are Canonical we will confirm them; unless that for evident Cause, and by the Advice of our said Brethren (the Cardinals) we shall think we ought to provide a Person more worthy and more useful to the Church, &c.'

The 6 Voices of the 4th Class are absolute for confirming the Bishop of Osnabrug. They are, Cardinal Altieri, Cardinal Grimani, Monsigr. Beccetti, Monsigr. Albani, Monsigr. Nuzzi, Monsigr. Gozzadini. Of these 6, only Cardinal Grimani has any Dependance on the Imperial Court.

So that there are 12 Voices absolutely in Favour of the Bishop of Osnabrug; against 5 absolute, 2 equivocal, and 7 conditional Votes, upon which the Party of Paderborn cry Victory. 'Tis certain however, that the Affair is not decided, that the Pope has reserv'd to himself the Decision of it, and that probably he will cause it to be reexamin'd.

I have faithfully related the Fact, without offering to judge of the Right, because I have not espous'd either Party;

Tros, Rurulusve fuit, nullo discrimine babebo.
Rome, Dec. 25. 1706. I am, Sir, &c.

A Letter written by Mr. H. from the Hague, to Mr. N. at Munster.

Sir,
YOU would have oblig'd me in not putting me upon informing you about a Trifle that does not deserve the least Regard. You must really be of a very inquisitive Temper, to be desirous to know what we think of the Letter written by Mr. G. from Rome to Mr. M. at Munster: But if you would have me continue to be your Correspondent, leave me to choose Matter, if you please; or at least don't be so urgent in things not worth the while. Had it not been for you, I should by this time have forgotten that there was one Mr. G. at Rome; and that that worthy Gentleman has undertaken to collect the Chat of the Piazza Navona and send it as News to his Friend at Munster. Hitherto his Letter has not had the Success he promis'd himself. He has not been able to perswade any Man of his Impartiality, tho' he has taken the Pains to make Ostentation of it in the Beginning and at the End of his Letter, where to shew his great Reading and profound Eruption he has thought proper to quote a Verse from Virgil, which he very improperly applies to his pretended Sincerity. That Sincerity must be great, since it obliges him to make 12 Opinions of but 4, as you may see by the List I send you, which is copied Word for Word from the Original come from Rome, from a Person not to be suspected, but more sincere or better inform'd than honest Mr. G. I can't conceive how he could imagine to be believ'd on his Word, against so many Persons of Honour, who being in no Interest but that of Truth, have sent hither and to other Places, quite contrary Relations to what he has the Assurance to affirm. And yet less can I conceive how 'tis possible, that desiring to be thought impartial, he should accuse of Corruption and Injustice illustrious Cardinals and worthy Prelates, whom his Holiness would not have chosen to examine so important an Affair, had he not been well perswaded of their Probity and Integrity. If Mr. G. be to be believ'd, of all the Cardinals and Prelates who gave their Voices for his Highness the Bishop of Paderborn, not one was act'd by Motives of his own Conscience. According to him, they are wicked Judges whom Worldly Designs prompted to betray their Honour, Duty, and Justice; and 'tis likely they will always pass for such in the Opinion of our Novellist, till they have chang'd their Minds, and have declar'd in Favour of his most serene Highness the Bishop of Osnabrug. I am afraid that even the Sovereign Pontiff himself will not escape being censur'd for Partiality by Mr. G. if it happen, as all Men of Understanding infallibly expect, that his Holiness grant a Bull conformable to the Decision made in the Congregation held the 23d of December.

Don't you think, Sir, a Man must be very warm, or have but few good Reasons to alledge, when to discredit Judges of such a Character as those concern'd in this Matter, he takes up with a wild and groundless Accusation, of their being of the Bourbon and and Spanish Faction, and such kind of Stuff, fit only to deceive for a few Days those who have not Capacity enough to discern the Motives that govern the Author of the impartial Letter. I could not forbear Laughing, when I saw, that to render the Integrity of Cardinal Cazzoni suspected, Mr. G. could find nothing to say, but that in Eminency is engag'd in a close Friendship with Messieurs Plettenberg and Fürstemberg. Was ever any thing more silly! those two Gentlemen are so well known and generally esteem'd at Rome as well as in their own Country, that it would be difficult, whatever Change were made in the Congregation, for them not to have some Friend in it among the Cardinals or the Prelates. 'Tis to be fear'd therefore, that in this Respect our Novelist will never want a Pretext for rejecting some one of the Judges that shall be against the Interests of the Party he espouses. What if he should happen to be one of those that made such pressing Instances at Rome, to hinder Cardinal Marescotti, a Man of Integrity if ever any Man was, from having a Place in that Congregation? An Exclusion of that Nature might with just Cause be complain'd of; especially seeing Cardinal Grimani, who on so many Occasion has shewn how much he is devoted to the Court of Vienna, to which he is beholding for his Purple, and on which he is absolutely dependant, was not excluded from judging of an Affair, in which he might be suspected of being both Judge and Party, by any that are capable of entertaining such unjust Sentiments as does the Novelist of Rome.

I don't understand what he means by his 12 Voices absolutely in Favour of the Bishop of Osnabrug, against 3 absolute, 2 equivocal, and 7 conditional Votes, upon which the Party of Paderborn cry Victory; nor by his 7 Voices that are defective if well consider'd, seeing 'tis necessary to supply their Deficiency. All the rest of the Piece seems to me no less obscure; and I wonder the Partisans of the House of Lorrain should be weak enough to expose to the publick View such wretched Stuff so ill put together. I am &c.
